WILL spectator sports ever again hold as much magic spell over the general public as they did 15 to 20 years ago? Will it make the question more specific, thousands of Edmontonians ever again talk, eat and sleep hockey as they did back in those almost legendary seasons when Duke Keats, Joe Simpson et al were at their peak here?

That is a question that many a veteran fan has asked himself and the past decades of times when he thinks back over those halcyon nights when some of the most spectacular hockey ever presented anywhere was being played out at the Arena here, at Saskatoon, at Regina, at Calgary and out at the coast.

In those days a mere suggestion that a Kista had a bad cold or a charity-house instantly became a matter of major importance here. Still it over an early morning cup of coffee in a downtown cafe and by supper time every man, woman and child in the city was discussing it with as much enthusiasm as they now discuss such matters as the fall of Singapore or the escape of the Nazi battleships from Brest.

"What will the Kaskimos do tonight?" was a question that doctor, lawyer, jurist, butcher and baker gave mighty serious attention to.

In recent years such a question asked an Edmonton team arouses only mild interest even in the innermost circle of rabid fans.

Color Has Faded Out

PERSONALLY I think that we will never see such days of intense interest in team games as they are today. One reason is that sport does not seem to produce the colorful characters that gripped and thrilled the folks back 20 years ago. The only reason for this lack of color seems to be that we prefer to use kids in our mania for speed and more speed. These youngsters haven't had a chance to develop character—in fact they are discouraged whenever they do show any indication of it. The coaches all seem to want docile youngsters who do exactly what they are told and are content to fit quietly into the machine.

I suppose it is just another aspect of the machine age we are in. Results are considered all important and individualism is something that must be subordinated to the utmost co-operation and co-ordination. Coaches shy away from the type of player they think may not accept the role of a cog in the machine they are putting together. We have unconsciously adopted the principles of mass production to our athletes and got a uniform product.

Another major reason why we are not likely to again see the intense interest of 20 years ago is that we have grown out of the small town category into that of a large city. We have lost a lot of that close personal contact stuff. The smaller towns and cities in Alberta may again enjoy recrudescence of fervent sport interest when they have a particularly good team, but we are not likely to see it here.

Problems of Whole World Face Us

THEN too, our interests have grown world-wide in the last two decades. We have radio, and the press and air travel are developing a world-wide consciousness and the bitter lessons of two world wars are not likely to let us forget that what happens in Ball today may be our personal headache tomorrow.

Until the world settles down to a stable peace and we have solved the economic problems between us and a reasonably care-free life, it will be hard to relink the old, all-absorbing interest in some particular sport team.

Those halcyon days of the past were a sort of recede for us. We were playing and enjoying ourselves without realizing that terrific problems and jobs were piling up ahead of us. Then the ball rang and we had to get back into school and buckle down. We still plugging away on this piled-up work and are sure to be for quite a spell yet.

Montreal's Hopes Soar

Canadiens Beat Rangers 2-1 In Overtime Struggle

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(CP)—Montreal Canadiens Tuesday vastly improved their chance of a National Hockey League playoff berth with a 2-1 overtime victory over the struggling league-leaders, New York Rangers, who lost their fourth straight game and fifth of the last six.

Victory, spoiling for Rangers the "Oiler" night in which they were expected to complete a winning streak of 12 years service, brought Canadiens up to a half game from Detroit Red Wings and Brooklyn Americans who are tied for fifth place in the league.

Coach Dick Irvin of Canadiens had to break up his line-up for most of the game when the right wing, Maurice Richard, was injured by a knock on the right side of his head, opening a cut that required three stitches.

But the kids got back to start the overtime period—and promptly won the game. Thirty seconds after the face off they were swirling in from the left side of the net, passed back and forth quickly until Buddy O'Connor was in scoring position. He shot the puck into the net.

Round by round Canadiens were backed in the ropes and staggered from left to the head and handed the puck to the body, but only in the seventh did he go down. He was floored by a particularly savage left and crumpled in a heap in a corner with a corner man's arm around him.

So no one sided was the scrap, despite Jenkins' ability to absorb punishment, that the Red Wings, Texas, fought with a left to the body after the opening bell. As on the defense, Jenkins was only his good knotted kept him from being knocked out.

Air Force Squad Holds Boston Bruins To Draw

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—(CP)—The season's most publicized hockey unit—Boston Bruins' Krauts—came back to amateur ranks last night and scored the final goal with less than a minute to play as their new team, Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers, battled Bruins of the National Hockey League to a 5-5 exhibition tie. Centre Milt Schmidt finished the game off with a flourish on a pass from lineman Bobby Bauer at 18:28 of the final period before 7,000 fans whose admissions brought an undisclosed sum to the Air Force benevolence fund.

The city's Flyers, transformed of overnight into outstanding favorites for the Allan Cup, got just the spark they needed to defeat the Bruins' Krauts—Bauer, Schmidt and Woody Dummar, linemen and buddies with Bruins since 1937. Against the force Bruins they provided a blend of brilliant yet spotty hockey.

MOGUL GETS ONE

Flyers entered the third period shielding a 3-1 lead but two goals by Boston's Jack McNeil followed by successful thrusts from Lloyd Grosrud and Eddie Weidman left Bruins holding a 5-3 margin with four minutes left.

But Flyers weren't through. An unheralded, third-stringer, forward Mike Miller, coated in from the left side and beat Frankie Brimkom from close range.

In the thrill-packed final minutes, Flyers' amirals swung around the Boston game before Schmidt got his second goal of the game to tie the count.

After Al Marshall, L. Broadner, chief of air staff, faced off the puck to open the game the teams settled down to a slow-paced brand of hockey. The first goal came from the left side of the net.

Amateur Vs. Pro Hockey Series Mooted By Ross

OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—(CP)—The National Hockey League's foremost man of ideas—Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins—sketched a blueprint yesterday for a post-season "world series" which would match amateur hockey's best team against the 1942 Stanley Cup champions.

Ross made his proposal before a luncheon meeting of hockey players and Royal Canadian Air Force officials. He acknowledged its fulfillment would be contingent on several factors.

It could be accomplished, he said, if Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers of the Ottawa Senior City Hockey League win the Allan Cup, as he was confident they would. Flyers would then challenge the Stanley Cup champions to a best-of-three series for the world's championship.

Proceeds, less nominal expenses, would be earmarked for the Air Force benevolence fund.

"I know that half your team is the greatest in the world," said Ross, pointing to Mill Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart, former Boston stars who will finish out the season with Flyers.

"If the rest of the team is nearly as good, I can guarantee you should win the Allan Cup."

As for the Stanley Cup champions, Ross said he felt sure they would be agreeable to such a series.

"I know we (Bruins) would be glad to play such a game and I hope I can speak for the other teams who have a chance to win the Stanley Cup," he said.

Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson, deputy chief of air staff, told Ross he was "overwhelmed" by the proposal and promised that Flyers will do their best to make it a reality.

Flyers and South Side battled to a 2-2 tie on Tuesday night in the first of their two-game total goal semi-final series in the City Midget Hockey League. The winner will meet the leading Maple Leafs for the championship.

Second game of the series will be played this week at the Stadium rink.

Stollery opened the scoring for the South Side in the first period on a play with Payne, but Barry combined with Lavalley to even the count a few minutes later.

Lavalley put the Flyers one up in the middle session on a three-way effort with Barry and Binkins, but McCaskill's goal on Green's pass in the third period deduced the lead.

No overtime was played.

Few Ball Clubs Have Signed Up All Top Players

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Little has been heard of contract controversies in the major leagues this winter for various reasons, but a check today showed many outstanding players still are unsigned on the eve of the training season.

Joe DiMaggio, who will be the highest paid star in baseball this year, has returned his contract at least once without a signature.

More amazing, perhaps, is the fact that only pitcher Lefty Gomez and shortstop Phil Rizzuto of all the regulars among the Yankees have agreed to terms.

New York Giants opened their training camp at Miami Monday with no more than a dozen players signed and several other clubs similarly have big groups outside the fold.

WAR PROBLEMS

Not all the players unsigned are disinterested. The war has posed so many important problems for the major leagues that some contracts were not mailed until last week.

As a result some players will bring their signed contracts into camp with them and others will come to terms as soon as they get on the scene and have a chance to talk over their desires.

However, there are enough headaches to go around.

WANTS $40,000

DiMaggio, who set a seasonal record by hitting in 36 consecutive games last summer, leading the Yankees to the world championship and earning the most valuable player award for himself, was reported to have been offered a contract for $37,500, the same amount he received last year. Most observers believe that he and President Edward G. Barrow of the Yanks will compromise on $40,000.

There has been no indication of what is delaying the signing of the other Yankers, whose camp opens next week-end.

Bonus arrangements, which some clubs have written into the year's contracts because of the uncertainty of attendance in war time, have caused some balks. A case in point is first baseman Dick Sebert of Philadelphia Athletics, who, it is understood, wants a definite commitment in five figures.

Good Health Is Declared Vital
In War Effort

Canada cannot wait until the war is over to introduce state medical and health insurance. If the country is to reach its peak in war production, Dr. Hunter Hunter told a meeting of the Western Canadian Medical Association in the Palliser Theatre, Tuesday night, "it is essential that the health of the nation be maintained by preventive and curative medical care, not less so in 1942 than in 1918." He said "it was proven that $40,000,000 worth of wages were lost by workers through illness in 1918."

Repetition of such a condition can and should be prevented by expansion of public health services and compulsory health insurance, also asserted.

MEDICAL EDUCATION
At present only one cent in every dollar spent on medical care is devoted to medical education in Canada, which stands far below the standard of health in pre-war Europe, the pointed out.

"While medical science has advanced tremendously in past years," he said, "the amount of medical care has also gone ahead. It is the responsibility of many in the low income brackets."

In 1935, he reported, 66 per cent of Canada's population was medically indigent; being unable to pay for medical care when needed, through lack of funds.

On no credit side of Canada's health program, Dr. Hunter laid among them the expansion of public health services provided by funds obtained through taxation, industrial hygiene, control of communicable diseases, food inspection, health inspection in agriculture, and provision of medical care to unemployed.

SOVIET LEADS
Outline of socialized medicine as provided in England, and New Zealand, through compulsory health insurance, and in Soviet Russia, under state control, was presented by the speaker, who declared that the greatest advance made in the world was in the Soviet Union.

"In Russia," he said, "the first state-operated medical service was provided as early as 1861, when local governments directed health care to the people, with preventive and curative medical aid being provided throughout the country."

In Britain, she said, the compulsory insurance funds are provided with 40 per cent coming from the employer and the employee each and 20 per cent from the government.

LOW DEATH RATE
"In Canada," she said, "surveys have been conducted of the war zone, showing certain lack." She praised the governmental work in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Ontario in tuberculosis control which are government controlled. In the three provinces, the death rate, due to T.B. is the lowest of all Canada.

There is need for greater aid through national health insurance, and an immediate survey must be made to prevent the need for greater expense later.

In that and all the other fields of medicine, institution of compulsory health insurance would provide very advantageous results, whether direct or indirect, to alleviate disease, 10 per cent of which is believed preventable.

Slides showing the relationship of food, housing, working condition and health services to health standards in Canada were shown at the meeting by Mr. McCreath. Mr. McCreath acted as chairman of the meeting.

Dr. Walter Johns of the clinical department of the University of Toronto was the speaker at the March meeting of the association, which presented a comparative study of democracy, socialism, communism, fascism and nazism.

Getting Around
Jack DeLong

The unusual case of the Edmonton pedestrian who was fined recently for failing to use the sidewalk and was injured by an automobile as a result, is interesting. In imposing the fine the magistrate emphasized the fact that there was a sidewalk along the city street, saying new sidewalks in certain sections was being discussed. One of the constables, who favored the proposal, observed that construction of a sidewalk in the First Trail area had terminated a dangerous and slippery crossing.

The interesting thing about this revelation is the fact that a simple engineering project succeeded in accomplishing something that law warnings and even object lessons failed to bring about. Human beings will, on the whole, follow the line of least resistance. For instance, experience proved that people would walk on the paved roadway, even although they were aware that such action was positively dangerous.

Warnings, pleas and threats didn't do much good. So at last the city constructed a sidewalk. It then became a matter of easier for people to walk where they were safe. So they did so. It seems there are two simple rules that might be observed if the co-operation of human beings is to be obtained. One is to remember that at all times that human beings are lazy. The other is to never forget human beings are conceited.

Joseph Stiglitz will be convinced the world revolution is succeeding at last when he receives a war wound and certificate of honor as the executive council of the Indian Federation of America.

The red men of America have also chosen the Russian Premier as the outstanding warrior of 1941. Chief of the Canadian Indian Affairs in Canada were in the province of Ontario, Mr. McCreath, Mr. McCreath acted as chairman of the meeting.

General Wavell was named in the tepee Gallup poll the Indian Federation conducted.

Well, isn't it natural for the Indians to do so?

Dorothy Dix Says:

"Love is enough" It is the eternal cry of romance, but love alone is not enough capital to marry on. For love isn't self-sustaining. It has to have an adequate financial foundation. It is one thing, it is a loveless girl, who has had three square meals every day of her life, to say that she can go on and do things just as much, and that she can get up on the society of her Romeo if she gets too much of it.

Also, she discovers that after marriage she takes just as much interest in pretty clothes as she did before marriage; that she likes to go to the theatre and do things just as much, and that she can get up on the society of her Romeo if she gets too much of it.

For the truth is that while love is the nucleus on the lemon pie of life, it isn't the whole thing. It adds sweetness and flavor and beauty to it, but what nourishes it is the good, substantial foundation under it.

Emotions do not last. Time withers them, as the sun does a fragile flower. No man and woman can keep thrilling to each other for thirty or forty years at a stretch. And no man and woman can ever be all-ideal and perfect. They must have other pleasures, other interests, other amusements.

It isn't enough for a husband and wife to love each other personally. They must love a lot of the same things. They must love the same books, the same kind of people, the same amusements, if they are to be happy together.

This is something that the boys and girls who cry out "love is enough" do not know, and that is why more than one-third of all youthful marriages end in divorce within five years after the wedding. What a pity they cannot be made to realize that it is not enough to love each other. They must have something in the cupboard besides love before they feel that they are happy together.

Minute Make-Ups

If you are a woman of affairs, good grooming plays an important part in your life. There are certain things you must do, and they are not always the same. They vary with the season, the occasion, the place, the people. They vary with the time of day, the weather, the mood, the moment. They vary with the individual, the personality, the style. They vary with the fashion, the trend, the whim. They vary with the place, the time, the people, the occasion, the mood, the moment, the individual, the personality, the style, the fashion, the trend, the whim.

Nevel-Waisted Maternity Mode

For many years I have found it necessary to explain away the common belief that acid fruits have any direct bearing in producing the condition of the body called acidosis.

From my experience, I am convinced there is not the slightest cause for believing that acid fruits have any direct effect in creating this condition.

In order to understand this fact, the first thing to know is that acidosis means. The simplest definition is that acidosis refers to a lowered alkalinity. In normal health, the tissues of the body are fairly alkaline, owing to the normal habits of living, including the use of too many foods which have an acid ash in the body.

The name acidosis implies that the body is overly acid, which is incorrect, as the blood and other tissues are not really so far from alkaline. Many patients refer to acidosis as hyper-acidosis, and this is also a misnomer.

Within the next few years, I believe that the correct term of lowered alkalinity will be adopted to designate the condition we now refer to as acidosis.

Acidosis is often produced by the use of those foods which have an acid ash in the body. When due to this cause, it is easily corrected by using more of the alkaline forming foods. Briefly listed, the acid forming foods are: meat, fish, and starches such as bread.

The alkaline forming foods are: fruit, fruit juice, vegetables, and pulses. Potatoes and lima beans also belong in this alkaline group.

A long time ago, when foods were first classified, some of the fruits were given the name of acid fruits, on account of their containing natural fruit acids. When eaten, such fruits are called acid, but after being burned in the body they leave an alkaline ash, and hence their final effect is an alkalizing effect.

Because the so-called acid fruits are often beneficial in correcting an acid built up by using too many acid-forming foods. Patients sometimes do not understand the point and when their doctor tells them to stay away from acid-forming foods, they think this means to stay away from the acid fruits.

Now, you wish to alkalize the body, the best method to use is the short fast on fruit juices. I have yet to find any other treatment which is superior to this. The best fruit juices to use are: orange, grapefruit, and cranberry.

Your Baby And Mine

By Mrs. GAYNE MADDOX

None of us can remember the difficulties which faced us when we began to speak. Usually as parents we are so impressed with the speed with which children acquire a vocabulary that we give little thought to these same difficulties.

Remember when the second and third years of the child's life may become noticeable. It is in this time the child has used two or three words in a sentence and then suddenly, without preliminary, has begun to stammer.

Whether this be due to a sort of stage fright, or to death of actual words to express his needs or ideas, or to a natural lag in the learning, is not easy to say.

Perhaps it is a little of all three. What is clear is that the most apparent reason the small child doesn't speak smoothly. He talks anxiously at the beginning of his sentences, ending an abash-ah until the family is distraught or he divides words in the middle and struts them along endlessly.

This sudden inability to speak fluently when he does not mean necessarily, that the child will be a stammerer. It is only a sign that for the present the mother should be most careful not to impose her child with the significance of his new habit, and if possible, to end, she should pretend to ignore it.

When he begins to speak, wait quietly until he has finished what he has to say, turning your eyes elsewhere so that any emotional reaction he may be suffering may be minimized.

In a week or two, the mother will notice that the child stammers less often and before he realizes it the stammering will be gone.

Unless this habit continues for months, in which case it cannot be ignored, the mother should discover that their children's stammering may be a sign of a deeper appearance and disappearance.

Mrs. M. H. F. suggests that we have the doctor advise some physical medicine to relieve the difficulty caused by the operation. For local treatment, a standard depilatory ought to be satisfactory.

During a surgical operation, a depilatory cream is used for the hair after it has been shaved for 20 minutes.

The unused hair cream can be used for 6000 a day.
